

SAP consulting firm using modern means to communicate with its customers itelligence is extending CeBIT!

Bielefeld/Internet, April 27, 2010 – CeBIT 2010 in Hanover, the world's largest computer trade fair, has come to an end, well almost... At www.itelligence.de/cebit, those interested can once again take the opportunity to virtually experience that real CeBIT feeling via their computers – this time without incurring any travel expenses. In addition to a wealth of information on itelligence and SAP, the online trade fair visitors can also watch video interviews and reports, which review the trade fair in a structured manner and offer impressions, which one can't experience at the actual trade fair.

According to Torsten Scholz, Marketing Director at itelligence AG: "Let's be honest, a trade fair is the ideal environment to obtain an overview but we often find ourselves wishing that we could experience and immerse ourselves in the impressions, which we obtained there, again in more peaceful surroundings. This can be wonderfully experienced thanks to the modern means of online communication now available to us."

From May 3-6, 2010, itelligence will once again make available all the trade fair information on its website free of charge. All you have to do is register with us. The effort is worth it as all our registered visitors are in with a chance to win one of three Apple iPads.

The direct link for this can be found at www.itelligence.de/cebit. In addition to information on itelligence, the website features the following areas :

- Consulting
- Solutions
- Outsourcing
- and CeBIT Live with trade fair TV (also for the iPhone), blogs and Twitter integration
